GREATER NAMIBIA

Himba People
The Himba are one of Namibia's best-known Indigenous communities, celebrated for their semi-nomadic lifestyle, distinctive red ochre body adornment, and deep connection to the land. Their traditions, cattle culture, and craftsmanship have been preserved for generations.

Etosha Pan The vast Etosha Pan is one of Africa's most striking natural features – a shimmering white salt pan so large it can even be seen from space. During the dry season, wildlife gathers around surrounding waterholes in extraordinary numbers, creating exceptional game-viewing opportunities in Etosha National Park.

Ovambo (Aawambo) People
The Ovambo (Aawambo) are Namibia's largest cultural group, traditionally known for farming, cattle keeping, and exceptional basket weaving. Their rich heritage is reflected in strong community traditions, music, dance, and craftsmanship.

Herero People
The Herero are known for their distinctive traditional attire, inspired by 19th-century European fashion, and their long-standing cattle-herding culture. Today, they proudly preserve their language, customs, and cultural identity across central and northern Namibia.
